GRAMMAR CONCEPTS – INFORMATION

Fronted Adverbials

What is a fronted adverbial?

A fronted adverbial is a word or phrase placed at the beginning of a sentence to give extra information about time, place, manner, or reason. It is followed by a comma.

Why do we use them?

Fronted adverbials make writing more interesting and help the reader understand when, where, how, or why something happens.

Examples

- Early in the morning, the young man went into the garden.
- In the small town, the family lived together.
- With great anger, she spoke to her brother.
- After school, the children played football.
- Without warning, the storm began.

Direct Speech

What is direct speech?

Direct speech shows the exact words spoken by a character. These words are written inside speech marks.

Rules to remember:

- Speech marks - " " - go around the spoken words.
- A comma usually comes before the closing speech marks.

L.O – I can apply knowledge to complete tasks.	Year 4

- The first word inside the speech marks begins with a capital letter.
- Reporting clauses (he said, she asked) are punctuated correctly.

Examples

- "Don't touch the mango tree," said the sister.
- The teacher said, "Open your books to page ten."
- "I will finish my homework later," he replied

Standard and Non-Standard English

What is standard English?

Standard English is the correct form of English used in writing and formal speech.

What is non-standard English?

Non-standard English is often used in informal speech but should not be used in school writing.

Examples:

- Non-standard: She don't like maths.
- Standard: She doesn't like maths.
- Non-standard: We was late for school.
- Standard: We were late for school.
- Non-standard: I ain't finished my work.
- Standard: I haven't finished my work.

Apostrophes to Show Possession

What does possession mean?

An apostrophe shows that something belongs to someone.

Rules and examples:

Singular noun → add 's	Plural noun ending in -s → add '	Plural noun not ending in -s → add 's
the boy's bag the sister's mango tree the dog's collar	the girls' books the teachers' room the farmers' crops	the children's toys the men's shoes the women's voices

Remember:

Apostrophes are not used to make words plural.

PASSAGE 1 – FICTION

The Mango Tree

Behind a small house stood a mango tree that was older than the children who lived there. Every afternoon, Lina went into the garden to care for it. She watered the roots, cleared away dry leaves, and spoke softly to the tree as she worked.

Her brother Amir watched from the doorway. "You spend too much time with that tree," he said. "You never help me tidy the house."

"That ain't true," Lina replied. "I help every morning. The mango tree needs care too."

Later that evening, their mother called them into the kitchen. "I've noticed the arguing," she said calmly. "Lina looks after the garden, and Amir helps inside. Both jobs are important."

The next day, Amir followed Lina outside. With curiosity, he asked, "Can you show me how to look after the tree?" Lina smiled and handed him the watering can.

From that day on, the mango tree was no longer Lina's responsibility alone. It became something they cared for together.

PASSAGE 2 – NON – FICTION

A Short History of Chocolate

Chocolate comes from cocoa beans, which grow on cacao trees in hot, rainy countries near the Equator. Long ago, people in Central and South America were the first to use cocoa beans. They did not eat chocolate as a sweet treat. Instead, they made a bitter drink by mixing cocoa with water and spices.

Many years later, cocoa beans were taken to Europe. People there began to experiment with the drink by adding sugar and milk. A famous chocolate maker, Willy Wonka, once said, "Chocolate should be sweet, warm, and full of joy." Hot chocolate soon became popular, especially in cold weather.

At first, only rich people could afford chocolate because cocoa was rare and expensive. Over time, new machines were invented, and chocolate became easier to make. This meant more people could enjoy chocolate in different forms, such as drinks and bars.

Today, chocolate is loved all around the world. Hot chocolate is still a favourite drink on cold days. "All you need," said Willy Wonka, "is good cocoa, warm milk, and a little imagination." Hot chocolate is usually made with cocoa powder, milk, and sugar, creating a comforting and delicious drink.
