Round up – Module 6

Reading comprehension:

Summer jobs are a good way for teenagers to earn money and learn new skills. During the school break, many teens find part-time work in their neighborhood. Some work in shops or restaurants, while others help at camps or parks.

These jobs teach important life skills. Teens learn to be responsible, arrive on time, and work with other people. They also learn how to speak politely to customers and follow instructions.

Summer jobs can help teens think about their future. They may discover what kind of work they enjoy. Overall, summer jobs are a helpful and positive experience for many teenagers.
