Allergies can affect people in different ways. When you're allergic to something, your immune system reacts. It might be pollen, dust, or animal fur. Your body thinks these things are harmful, so it fights against them. You might start to sneeze or cough a lot. Your nose might get runny, and your eyes could water. Some people even get a headache. If you know you're allergic to something, it's a good idea to avoid it. However, don't worry. If you do get allergies, there are medicines you can take. They can help you feel better. If you're not sure about allergies, a doctor can help. They will ask you questions and might do some tests to find out what you're allergic to.

- 1. What happens when you are allergic to something?
 - A. Your immune system fights it.
 - B. Your body doesn't know it's harmful.
 - C. Your eyes fill with dust.
- 2. What is NOT a symptom of allergies?
 - A. Coughing
 - B. Watery eyes
 - C. A dry nose
- 3. What can help you feel better if you have allergies?
 - A. Talking to the doctor
 - B. Fighting your immune system
 - C. Taking medicines
- 4. How can a doctor find out what you're allergic to?
 - A. By answering your questions
 - B. By giving you medicine
 - C. By doing some tests
