READING

Text (~150 words)

Last summer I travelled around Italy with two friends. We decided not to stay in expensive hotels, so we booked cheap accommodation through a travel website. This helped us save money and spend more on experiences such as food, museums and transport.

One of the best parts of the trip was exploring small towns that many tourists never visit. Instead of staying only in famous cities like Rome or Venice, we travelled off the beaten track and discovered beautiful villages in the countryside.

Travelling this way wasn't always easy. Sometimes trains were delayed or we got lost because we didn't understand the local transport system. However, these problems often turned into funny memories later.

What I learned from this trip is that travelling doesn't have to be expensive to be enjoyable. If you plan carefully and stay flexible, you can discover amazing places and meet interesting people along the way.
