The experts who 1) ..... (study) the Patagonian treasure have just informed that the objects found some months ago 2) ..... (belong) to an Inca princess. This is a very important finding since it proves that the Incas 3) ..... (go) as far as Santa Cruz as they settled all along the Andes mountains.

Last year, while Richard Burns and his colleagues 4) ..... (work) in Argentina, they 5) ..... (make) an amazing discovery. As they 6) ..... ..... (dig) in search of dinosaurs, they 7) ..... (find) objects from the Incas. At the beginning they 8) ..... (think) they were not real. It 9) ..... (not-be) the typical area where explorers expect to find ancient treasures! Burns told BBC that as they 10) ..... (leave) the place to go back to their country, they also saw the ruins of an old temple where the Incas worshipped their gods.

The question now is: Should the objects be shown in the British museum or should they be kept in Argentina, where they were found? What do you think?
