Read the following article and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the Questions from 26 to 30.

Digital media is any form of media that is created, viewed, and distributed via electronic devices. Examples of digital media include websites, social media, videos, video games, digital advertising, software, and electronic books. With the development of technology and smart devices in recent years, digital media saw a sharp rise. This raises the question of whether digital media will replace traditional media such as printed newspapers, broadcast TV, and radio. Below are two opinion pieces sent to our Debate Corner this week.

Minh Quang

Nowadays, it is much easier and more convenient to access information via digital media. Most digital content is also freely accessible. All it takes is a few clicks, and you can read the latest news, watch videos, or see online adverts. In addition, digital media forms are more interactive. For example, customers can provide instant feedback, which can be used to solve any problems. In return, almost every organisation can reach its target customers easily via digital media. Furthermore, digital media is more flexible since information can be updated easily and frequently. By contrast, articles in printed newspapers or adverts on TV cannot be changed immediately. With more than 75 million social media users in Viet Nam and the number is increasing, it will not be long before traditional media becomes a thing of the past. Pham Hoa

Pham Hoa

Digital media is very convenient, but its strengths are also its own weaknesses. Since anyone with access to computers and the Internet can post or share information online, it raises the question of how credible it is. On the other hand, traditional media offers information from reliable sources that are fact-checked. Moreover, let us not forget that digital media relies on the Internet and smart devices to work well. There are still remote or disadvantaged areas in Viet Nam where access to technology is limited or too expensive. Many people also still struggle with technology. So although digital media is on the rise, traditional media such as printed newspapers, broadcast TV, and radio is here to stay.

While trust in media as a whole may be at an all-time low, a new study by the EBU has shown the public's trust in traditional media (broadcast and the written press) is actually on the rise. However, people's trust in new media continues to fall: 61% of European countries distrust the internet while 97% have no faith in social networks.

The EBU's new report –Trust in Media 2018 –shows the figures illustrating the differences between people's trust in traditional and new media. Broadcast media remain the most trusted forms of media with 59% of people tending to trust radio (equivalent to 2017) and 51% trusting TV in the EU (an increase of 1 percentage point on 2017). Trust in the written press has also slowly improved over the last 5 years and it is now trusted by 47% of EU citizens. At the same time, people's trust in the internet and social media has been eroded by fake news, misinformation and disinformation. Only 34% of EU citizens trust the internet and a mere 20% now trust social networks (down from 36% and 21% respectively in 2017).

Trust in Media 2018 is based on data published in the 88th Eurobarometer survey and gives an idea of European citizens' perception of the trustworthiness of different types of media. The survey consists of approximately 1000 face-to-face interviews in the 33 countries covered by the study. The report shows how European citizens' trust in broadcast media is closely connected with a free and independent press. The higher the level of trust in a country's radio and TV, the higher press freedom in that country tends to be. There are also strong regional differences with the Nordics and Albania tending to trust traditional media the most while Eastern Europeans tend to trust social networks and the internet more.

The EBU's Head of Strategy and the Media Intelligence Service Roberto Suárez Candel said: "The results of our research show that good quality, impartial media is highly valued by the public. "Public service media play an important role in that and, together, our members make an invaluable contribution to society. The role of our public service Members in upholding democratic values and supporting media freedom is clearly demonstrated by the results of our research."

Traditional media come from the people and antecede the mass media; their appeal has historically been both functional and aesthetic. Whether of roughly hewn folk origins or of classically rigid moulds, they have always served to entertain, educate to reinforce existing ideas or ideologies or to change existing values and attitudes. In other words, it is a means of changing values, attitudes and norms in order to provide a proper climate for social and economic progress. It is also a method of promoting certain behavioural acts or patterns.

The aim is to get people to perform specific acts to achieve objectives of national policy (e.g. visiting clinics, investing in bonds, using fertilizer). Moreover, it is a channel for conveying information about available techniques and facilities which people may use to solve problems.

Being close to people at the local level, these channels are potentially useful in the service of social concerns, as determined by local, provincial or national authorities themselves. They are, moreover, abundantly present in areas where mass media technology has not been fully or effectively developed to capture sustained interest at local, provincial or national levels. Folk media are personal forms of entertainment and communication. This is important because behavioural changes are most easily brought about by personal interaction. These forms of art are a part of the way of life of a community and provide acceptable means of bringing development issues into the community in its own-terms. They are capable of reaching intimate social groups, thus making use of already established communication networks in the audience.

Question 30: Why is traditional media considered the root of mass media?

- A. Because it relates to the minds and hearts of the local population.
 B. Because it is a form of a country's as well as a region's traditional arts.
 C. Because both the local people and foreign visitors like puppetry the most.
 D. Because its purpose is art performance and entertainment.

Question 31: What purpose of traditional media is NOT mentioned?

- A. Education B. Entertainment
 C. Information dissemination D. Value reformation

Question 32: What is the easiest way to change a person's behaviour?

- A. By personal interaction B. Through modern entertainment
 C. By public speaking D. By information exchange

Question 33: The phrase "established communication networks" probably refer to _____.

- A. traditional media B. development issues
 C. provincial audience D. intimate social groups

Question 34: What is the word "hewn" in Paragraph 1 closest in meaning to?

Ensuring social media becomes a safer space for teenagers requires collective efforts from users, platform developers, and authorities. Firstly, educating teens about online safety measures is crucial. Teaching them to verify sources, identify trustworthy information, and recognise potential dangers of interacting with anonymous users can empower them to navigate social media more safely. Additionally, promoting open discussions about online behaviours and the impact of cyberbullying can help raise awareness and encourage responsible usage among teenagers.

Secondly, platform developers must prioritise the implementation of updated safety features and policies. Regular updates to privacy settings, content moderation tools, and reporting mechanisms can enhance user protection and foster a safer online environment.

Lastly, collaboration between parents, educators, and policymakers is essential in establishing comprehensive guidelines and support systems for teenage internet users. Encouraging parental involvement, providing resources for digital literacy education, and advocating for stricter regulations on online platforms can collectively contribute to creating a safer digital landscape for teenagers to explore and connect.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

More than a decade ago the UK investigative journalist Nick Davies published Flat Earth News, an exposé of how the mass media had abdicated its responsibility to the truth. Newsroom pressure to publish more stories, faster than their competitors had, Davies argued, led to journalists becoming mere “churnalists”. Shocking as Davies’ revelations seemed in 2008, they seem pretty tame by today’s standards, writes Ben Lorica, Chief Data Scientist at O’Reilly.

We now live in a post-truth world of Fake News and “alternative facts”; where activists don’t just seek to manipulate the news agenda with PR but now use advanced technology to fake images and footage. A particularly troubling aspect of these “deepfake” videos is their use of artificial intelligence to fabricate people saying or doing things with almost undetectable accuracy. The result is that publishers risk running completely erroneous stories –as inaccurate as stating that the world is flat –with little or any ability to check their source material and confirm whether it is genuine. The rise of unchecked fakery has serious implications for our liberal democracy and our ability to understand what’s truly going on in the world.

The technology to manipulate imagery has come a long way since Stalin had people airbrushed out of history. Creating convincing yet fake digital content no longer requires advanced skills or a well-resourced (mis)information bureau. Anyone with a degree of technical proficiency can create content that will fool even the experts. Take the faked footage of Nancy Pelosi earlier this year, which was doctored to make her look incoherent and was viewed two and a half million times before Facebook took it down. This story shows how social media is giving new life to the old aphorism that “a lie can go halfway around the world before the truth has a chance to put its boots on”.

The propagation of lies and misinformation is immeasurably enhanced by platforms like Twitter and Facebook that enable virality. What’s more, the incentives for creating fake content now favour malicious actors, with clear economic and political advantages for disseminating false footage. Put simply, the more shocking or extreme the content, the more people will share it and the longer they will stay on the platform. Meanwhile, counterfeiters can manipulate the very tools being developed to detect and mitigate deepfake content, just as the security industry inadvertently supplies software that can be misused for cybercrime.

A. mistakenly B. unwittingly C. deliberately D. innocently
