8- Why do kids everywhere like Play-Doh?

Many valuable and great inventions came about accidentally or by chance. One of the most famous examples is Post-it Note. A scientist named Spencer Silver was trying to make a strong glue, but instead he created a very weak one. Later, another scientist used it for sticky notes that can be removed easily. This led them to Post-it Note.

One more accidental invention is Play-Doh. It was first made as a material to clean walls. But teachers discovered children liked it. Soon, kids everywhere liked Play-Doh very much. It helped them be creative and make different shapes. These discoveries show that sometimes unexpected mistakes can lead to inventions that make life safer and easier.
