Indefinite pronouns

We use indefinite pronouns to talk about people, things and places that we don't name. We use indefinite pronouns with some, every and no in affirmative sentences.

Everyone's got a ticket. No one's missing. I'd like to see something about life in ancient Rome.

We use indefinite pronouns with any in negative sentences and questions.

Is there anything from ancient Egypt? I haven't seen anything as interesting as this before.

Jamie: Today I met an architect. He was rebuilding an old house, and I helped him. Here's a photo.

Henry: Great photo! But it isn't easy to build a house, is it?

Jamie: No, it isn't! We were building this house with the same things that people used thousands of years ago. It was hard work, but it's a nice house, isn't it?

Henry: Yes, it is. It's quite simple, but it looks just like a stone age house, doesn't it? We can see how people used to live, can't we?

Jamie: Yes, we can. And this one is a big house, isn't it? It's like a house that an important person used to live in. In those days, the important people lived in big houses. Most houses were smaller than this one.

Henry: Wow, what a great experience!

Question tags

Question tags are short questions at the end of sentences. We often use them to check that the person we are speaking to agrees with us or to check that we are right.

If the sentence is affirmative, we use a negative question tag.

*It's a nice house, isn't it?

If the sentence is negative, we use an affirmative question tag.

*It isn't a nice house, is it?

The verb we use in the question tag depends on the verb used in the sentence. Most verbs use do.

*Most people live in bigger houses, don't they?

If the main verb is be or a modal verb, we repeat it in the question tag.

*This is a big house, isn't it?

*We can see how people used to live, can't we?

The question tag for I'm is aren't I?

*I'm a good player, aren't I?

There is always a comma before the question tag. We usually use contractions in the negative form.

*You're very excited, aren't you?
