Why Are Teenagers Sleepy?

PART ONE

Adi Wolff works for the magazine Teen Plus. She talked to sleep expert¹ Dr. Avi Dagan about teens' sleeping habits.

Adi: Many teenagers aren't able to fall asleep until late at night. Why not?

Dr. Dagan: Teenagers just don't get tired as early as adults. They have a different body clock.

Adi: What is a body clock?

Dr. Dagan: It's a system² in the body that tells you when it's bedtime and how long you need to sleep. Babies, for example, need to sleep about 17 hours a day.

Adi: How many hours do teenagers need to sleep?

Dr. Dagan: They need between 8 and 10 hours, but most teens sleep less than eight hours.

Adi: So, is that why teenagers are often sleepy in the morning?

Dr. Dagan: Yes, they fall asleep late and have to wake up early to go to school. However, that's not the only reason why teens don't get enough sleep.

Adi: What do you mean?

Dr. Dagan: Well, many teens look at screens just before bedtime.

Adi: Why is that a problem?

Dr. Dagan: Because the light from a phone or a laptop is very strong. It keeps you awake, even when you are tired.

PART TWO

Adi: So, teenagers have a different body clock. What can we do to make life easier for them? Do you have any suggestions?

Dr. Dagan: The best is to start school a little bit later. In California, for example, there is a new law that says that schools can't start 5 before 8.30.

Adi: What about the second problem? When should we stop looking at our screens?

Dr. Dagan: About two hours before bedtime. That way our brain can calm down* and we can get ready for a good night's sleep.

* calm down להירגע / يهدأ

1. Dr. Dagan thinks that schools should start
