Read the following passage about Enjoying Life at Midlife and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Midlife is an important time in our lives. Many people feel more confident and sure about their future during these years. At this time, people often think about their jobs, families, and health in new ways. This period helps us understand what is really important to us. Instead of thinking midlife is bad or boring, many experts say it is a good chance to make changes and live more honestly and happily.

Katie Fogarty is a famous podcaster and career coach who helps people during midlife. She believes midlife is like getting permission to start again. People can change jobs, follow their dreams, or improve their health and happiness. For women who want better careers, Fogarty says we must believe in ourselves and trust that good jobs still exist for us. She recommends learning new skills, trying small business ideas, and asking friends and colleagues for help and advice.

Building confidence in midlife takes hard work, like training a muscle every day. Although changes in our bodies can affect how we feel about ourselves, there are good medical treatments available to help. Women are naturally good at working with others, listening to people, and solving problems quickly. These skills become even stronger and better as women get older. In business, women can lead teams with better skills and more experience than before.

Women over fifty have special strengths that younger people may not have yet. These include wisdom from experience, a good understanding of different situations, strong judgment, and the ability to stop worrying about being perfect. These women feel freer and can be more creative in their work. All of these qualities help them succeed in both work and personal life.

Read the following passage about the Understanding Revenge Bedtime Procrastination and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

Revenge bedtime procrastination is a habit where people stay awake late on purpose to have personal time, even though they know sleep is important. This term comes from a Chinese expression meaning "staying up late to fight back," and this rings true for many people today. [I] Many people do this because they feel stressed, work too much during the day, or just like doing things at night. When people cannot control themselves in the evening, they keep staying awake longer than they should.

Many reasons explain why people do this. Some people have busy jobs that take most of their time and energy, so they feel very tired. By staying awake late, they want to enjoy time for themselves. They may scroll on their phones, read books, watch films, or do things they like. [II] Young people often do this too. They think staying late is a way to be free from work and the daily rules that control their lives.

However, not getting enough sleep causes real health problems. Adults should sleep seven to nine hours every night. [III] When people do not sleep enough, they cannot remember things well, cannot think clearly, feel sad or angry, and make bad choices. Sleeping too little makes people more likely to get heart disease, diabetes, gain weight, have weak bodies, feel sick often, have body pain, and feel sad or depressed. These health problems may not show right away, but they will come later and hurt people's lives very badly.

Fortunately, people can fix this problem. [IV] They should go to bed and wake up at the same time each day. They need a cool, dark room for sleeping. They should use phones less before bed and do calm things instead. They should drink less coffee and not smoke or drink alcohol before sleep. Short naps during the day can help too. If these things do not work, they should talk to a doctor for more help and advice.
