Arizona is a dry land. In Arizona there is the famous Grand Canyon. It was not built by man, it was 'built' by nature. Ages ago torrential rains fell on a dry plain. They cut channels in the earth, sweeping the dry, loose soil off. More rains fell and cut the channels deeper and deeper, for thousands of years.

The main channel is a mile-deep canyon. Its sides are of coloured rock. It is the Grand Canyon. Far below it, the torrent runs, still cutting the canyon even deeper.

This text tells about ...

- 1) Physics
- 2) Sport
- 3) Zoology
- 4) Physical education
- 5) Botany
- 6) Geography

- A. It is a branch of biology that deals with the study of plants, including their structure, properties, and biochemical processes. Also included are plant classification and the study of plant diseases and of interactions with the environment. The principles and findings of botany have provided the base for such applied sciences as agriculture, horticulture, and forestry. Plants were of great importance to early man; he depended upon them as sources of food, shelter, clothing, medicine, ornament, tools and magic.
- B. It is a branch of biology that studies the members of the animal kingdom and animal life in general. It studies both individual animals and animal populations, the relationships of animals to each other, to plants, and to the nonliving environment. Domestication of animals forced man to take a systematic and measured view of animal life. Study of animal life by the ancient Greeks became more rational, if not yet scientific, in the modern sense.
- C. The name of this science is translated from Ancient Greek as 'knowledge of nature'. It is one of the most fundamental scientific disciplines, and its main goal is to understand how the universe behaves. It is one of the oldest academic disciplines and, through its inclusion of astronomy, perhaps the oldest. New ideas in this subject often explain the fundamental mechanisms studied by other sciences and suggest new avenues of research in academic disciplines such as mathematics and philosophy.
- D. In most educational systems, this subject (also called physical training or gym), is a course which provides physical knowledge and skills to an individual or a group. It also can refer to any sport or physical activity students take part in through their school system. It should be noted that unlike other curricula, a majority of the course work is participated in, rather than 'studied'. The purpose of physical education involves more than training the body, or physical fitness.

E. It is the study of the environments, places, and spaces of Earth's surface and their interactions. It can be divided in terms of two branches: human and physical. Human deals with the study of people and their communities, cultures, economies, and interactions with the environment by studying their relations with and across space and place. Physical deals with the study of processes and patterns in the natural environment.
