How green is Greenland?

The largest island in the world is Greenland, located near Canada and Iceland. Greenland's name makes people think that it is green, but most of Greenland is actually covered in ice. So how did it get its name? Well, one story tells us that a man was sent to the island as a punishment for a crime. He had to live there, and he wanted other people to join him, so he named it Greenland. He hoped the name would get people to move there!

Greenland has a lot of space, but most of the population lives in small areas on the coast, where there is no ice. You can't drive a car between towns because there are no roads! The most popular way to travel in the summer is by boat.

Greenland also has the largest national park in the world, which is located in the northeast corner of the island. No one lives there, but tourists can take a tour through the park on a cruise and see the amazing wildlife. Many scientists also go there to study the weather.

In fact, Greenland is one of the most important places for scientific research. The weather is getting warmer because of climate change, and this means the ice in Greenland has started to get thinner. This is very bad news for people and animals everywhere in the world. We need Greenland to stay covered in ice for the future of our planet.
