1 Javi – Morocco Motorcycle Trip

Living in Madrid makes it easy to travel, so I wanted to try something different. I decided to ride a motorcycle around Morocco. At first, I thought about taking a direct flight to Tangier, but I wanted more adventure. I even looked at a short cruise across the Mediterranean, but in the end, I preferred something faster and more exciting.

So, first I took the high-speed train from Madrid to Malaga, which can reach 300 km/h. There were many passengers on board, but it was still a comfortable journey. Then I flew by helicopter across the Mediterranean to Ceuta. From there, I went to Tetouan, where I picked up the motorcycle I had rented. After that, my real journey started.

I spent 10 days riding around Morocco. I felt very free during the trip, and the experience was amazing.

2 Mike – Cycling in the Netherlands

For many years, I usually traveled to Southeast Asia for holidays. I have visited Thailand, the Philippines, Vietnam, Cambodia, and Laos. But last summer, I wanted to try something new. I had heard about the ferry from Hull to Rotterdam, although I had never taken it before. I decided to go to the Netherlands for a cycling holiday.

I bought a one way ticket and traveled around for almost two weeks. I didn't have special cycling clothes or an expensive bike, but it didn't matter. I enjoyed riding through different towns and the countryside. I was surprised to discover so many beautiful places so close to each other.

3 Mohammed – Camel Trek in the Dubai Desert

I had never ridden a camel before, so I was excited when I finally had the chance. When I have free time from work, I like to travel. I have visited many countries, but I had never crossed a desert on a camel. A few months ago, I saw an advertisement for a trip organized by the Hamdan bin Mohammed Heritage Center, and I decided to join.

On the trip day, I met a group of about 30 people. We spent 13 days riding camels across the desert, and we traveled about 680 km in total. We rode over 50 km each day, and the route took us through places such as Tel Marib, South Shah, and the Al Maha Sanctuary, a famous wildlife area. It was an amazing experience, and I learned a lot about Emirati culture and how my ancestors used to live.
