

OK class – listen carefully! I want to tell you about a fantastic travel writing competition I've heard about. The company holding the competition is called 'World Explorer' and they are offering some _____. They're well known for running expeditions for young people to places like _____, Peru and _____, but the _____ of this competition is going to join an expedition to _____!

The expedition is going to take place next year and is going to last for _____. You're going to spend _____ in the town of Churchill and then trek out to a research centre on skis or snow shoes, where you're going to study local plants and wildlife with a group of scientists.

It really is an amazing opportunity!

To enter, you need to write an article about a place you have travelled to. You must include information about the _____ you met, the _____ and the local _____. Make it as interesting and entertaining as you can!

Based on how popular the competition was last year, the judges are expecting around _____, so that gives you an idea of how good your article must be! You should write around _____, and definitely _____. The judges won't even read it if it's longer than that, so be careful.

_____ date is the 19th of January, so you've got a few weeks left to write your article. It must _____ the 19th of February, and the _____ are going to be sent out on the 19th of April.

One last thing – as long as you are under 16, the competition is free to enter. You must include your _____, as this is how they're going to contact winners. Photographs will only be needed if your _____, so no need to send those yet. Good luck everyone!
