The Digital Revolution: An Interview with Dr. Aris Miller

Interviewer: _____

Dr. Miller: It's a pleasure to be here. Life was certainly slower! Before these gadgets existed, people used to carry paper maps when they traveled. If you got lost, you would stop and ask a stranger for directions. You couldn't just look at a device in your hand.

Interviewer: _____

Dr. Miller: Well, online shopping didn't exist, so we used to walk from shop to shop to find the best prices. It wasn't very convenient. Now, it's much more affordable because you can compare prices instantly on your phone. You would spend hours at the mall; now, you can buy everything in minutes.

Interviewer: _____

Dr. Miller: Definitely. In the past, people used to write long letters and wait weeks for a reply. Today, our digital world allows us to send messages in a second. We stay in touch with friends across the world constantly. However, some people say we used to talk to each other more in person. Back then, you would visit a friend's house without calling first just to say hello!

Interviewer: _____

A. It seems we are much more connected now.

B. Technology really has changed everything. Thank you, Dr. Miller.

C. Dr. Miller, thank you for joining us. Today, we are talking about how technology has changed our daily routines. How was life different before everyone had a

D. That sounds much more difficult! What about shopping?
