

Tet is an important celebration in Vietnam. It usually happens in late January or early February. People celebrate it to welcome the new year and spend time with their families. Before Tet, people often clean and decorate their houses. During the holiday, they visit relatives, give lucky money to children, and enjoy traditional food like banh chung. There are many colorful flowers and special markets at this time. I really like Tet because it is fun and meaningful. However, I don't like it when the streets are too crowded. Overall, Tet is a wonderful time for everyone in my country.
