

Last Saturday, Tom went to the library because he needed a book for his school project. He wanted to find good information and not make mistakes, so he decided to look up everything carefully.

When he arrived, he walked around the shelves and looked at different titles. There were so many books that it was difficult to choose. After a few minutes, he finally picked a book with an interesting cover and sat down to read.

The book was very exciting, and Tom enjoyed it a lot. He read page after page and forgot about the time. Suddenly, he looked at his watch and felt worried. It was getting late, and the library was going to close soon.

Tom quickly packed his bag and ran outside. Unfortunately, it was raining heavily, and there was a lot of traffic on the roads. Because of that, the bus was late.

Tom waited, but then he realised that he had forgotten his notebook in the library. He ran back inside, found it, and came out again. However, his bus had already left. So, he had to walk home in the rain, feeling a bit upset but also thinking that next time he would be more careful.
