Public transport plays an important role in many cities around the world. Every day, millions of people travel by buses, trains, and subways to go to work, school, or other places. These vehicles can carry many passengers at the same time, so they help reduce traffic on the roads. Moreover, travelling by public transport is usually cheaper than using a private car or motorbike. People only need to buy a ticket instead of paying for fuel and parking. For this reason, many students and workers prefer to use buses or subways.
