Congratulations! You've applied for several jobs, and you just found an email inviting you to your first job interview next Tuesday. That's great! But you still have to attend an interview before you get hired. Here are some important things that you should know about interviewing – so that you can get that job you've always wanted.

1. First, go online and find out as much as you can about the company and the position that you are applying for. This is important because you want a job that is right for you.
2. Before the interview, prepare a list of questions that you think the interviewers may ask you. Then, practice answering them, perhaps with a friend.
3. Dress well for the interview. However, this doesn't mean that you have to arrive for the interview wearing a suit and tie if you are interviewing for a job as a waiter or a waitress.
4. Arrive a few minutes early. Arriving late for an interview is never a good thing.
5. It's polite to give each of them a printed copy of your résumé. Bring several copies of your résumé with you.
6. Smile, be friendly and confident. Use good eye contact and body language. Remember to relax, because, if you feel nervous, you will look and sound nervous.
7. Finally, email your interviewers (after a day or two) and thank them for their time.

23. Being invited to an interview means that you will certainly get hired.
24. It's necessary to research the company and the job that you are applying for.
25. You should only practice answering questions by yourself before the interview.
26. Dressing in a suit and tie is not required for every job interview.
27. The writer advises people to consider all of the following suggestions EXCEPT _____.
    A. show your confidence and avoid feeling nervous
    B. write letters to your interviewers right after the interview
    C. provide each interviewer with a printed version of your résumé
    D. go to the interview a few minutes ahead of time
28. What could be the best title for the passage?
