Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 23 to 30.

Factory workers across Vietnam are facing deep uncertainty following President Trump's announcement of a potential 46% tariff on Vietnamese imports. Although the tariff has been paused for 90 days, fear is already spreading. Nguyen Thi Tuyet Hanh, a line manager earning $577 a month, remembers the hardship her family endured when her husband lost his job in 2023. For workers like her, the threat of higher tariffs signals a possible return to those difficult times, causing them to live in constant anxiety about the future.

Vietnam's rapid rise as a manufacturing hub has been largely driven by American demand, which accounted for over a quarter of its economy last year. However, textile and garment factories, operating on slim 5% profit margins, are under strain as U.S. retailers cut orders or demand lower prices. Tran Nhu Tung, chairman of Thanh Cong Garment, says his company is trying to avoid layoffs by exploring new markets in the Middle East and Europe while negotiating with U.S. clients to absorb the potential tax burden.

The uncertainty is affecting more than just garments. Mian Apparel, employing 12,000 workers, is rushing to meet orders before the tariff pause ends. Meanwhile, businesses like a home fragrance manufacturer are halting seasonal hiring as clients delay or cancel orders. With up to 90% of their customers based in the U.S., companies are worried about supply chain shifts.

Without a solid agreement between the U.S. and Vietnam, the situation may worsen. Even a prolonged pause without clarity could prompt American buyers to relocate sourcing. While Vietnam may benefit from China's tariff struggles, unresolved uncertainty remains a critical threat to its export-driven economy.

Read the following passage about the power of images and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 31 to 40.

Celebrities and influencers often gain widespread recognition through social media platforms, reality shows, or traditional media. [I] Fame brings several benefits: it helps individuals build personal brands, attract sponsorship deals, and influence public opinion. [II] This influence can also empower celebrities to support charitable causes, advocate for social change, and become role models for younger generations. [III] In the best cases, fame becomes a tool for positive impact both commercially and socially. [IV]

However, not all celebrities use their influence responsibly, and some prioritize profit over ethics. A recent case in Vietnam has sparked controversy involving the company "Chị Em Rọt", which partnered with famous personalities like Hằng Du Mục, Quang Linh Vlogs, and beauty queen Nguyễn Thúc Thùy Tiên. These influencers promoted a product called Kera-a vegetable-flavored candy-claiming that "one piece equals one plate of vegetables," aiming to appeal especially to children and pregnant women. The marketing messages were powerful, emotionally persuasive, and widely spread across social platforms, but the product's actual quality fell far short of the advertised promises.

Upon investigation, scientific tests revealed several alarming facts about the candy. Kera contained 33.4 g of Sorbitol per 100 g -a sugar alcohol with laxative effects when consumed in large quantities. Overconsumption can lead to digestive issues such as bloating, cramps, or diarrhea, particularly in children and individuals with sensitive stomachs. Furthermore, the fiber content was only 0.935%, far below what one would expect from a "vegetable replacement." The absence of clear Sorbitol labeling on the packaging violated food safety regulations and misled consumers.

This raised serious concerns about both health risks and ethical standards in celebrity-endorsed advertising campaigns.

This incident serves as a warning for both consumers and public figures. Consumers should be smart and skeptical when encountering product endorsements, even from well-known public figures. Researching product details, checking ingredients, and reading trusted reviews can help avoid potential health risks. At the same time, celebrities must carefully evaluate the quality and safety of the products they promote. Their public image, the trust of their audience, and the health of consumers are all at stake. Ethical responsibility from both sides is essential to ensure a healthy, transparent, and trustworthy marketplace.

Question 31 [1093033]: Where in paragraph 1 does the following sentence best fit?

Many companies seek collaborations with celebrities to promote their products, relying on their popularity to boost sales.

- A. [I]
- B. [II]
- C. [III]
- D. [IV]

Question 35 [1093037]: Which of the following best summarises paragraph 3?

- A. Tests showed that Kera contained an excessive amount of Sorbitol, which could negatively affect the digestive system of some consumers.
- B. The product was found to have a much lower fiber content than expected, raising doubts about the truthfulness of its nutritional claims.
- C. Scientific tests revealed that Kera had potentially harmful ingredients and misleading labeling, raising health and ethical concerns.
- D. Influencers were praised for promoting a candy that helps improve children's nutrition with balanced ingredients.

Question 36 [1093038]: The word violated in paragraph 3 is OPPOSITE in meaning to

- A. ignored
 - B. opposed
 - C. complied
 - D. observed

Question 37 [1093039]: Which of the following is TRUE according to the passage?

- A. In most cases, fame leads to negative consequences both in business and social communities.
- B. Kera candy was praised for its excellent quality and exceeded all advertised claims.
- C. Excessive consumption of Kera candy may negatively affect the digestive system.
- D. Sorbitol in Kera candy has no side effects and is completely safe for all age groups.

Question 38 [1093040]: Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in paragraph 4?

- A. Buyers are encouraged to trust products recommended by celebrities on social media.
- B. People must be cautious and think critically about advertised products regardless of who promotes them.
- C. Consumers should ignore all product endorsements because most celebrities promote harmful items.
- D. Well-known public figures always ensure the safety and quality of the products they endorse.

Question 39 [1093041]: Which of the following can be inferred from the passage?

- A. If there is no government intervention, issues with celebrity product endorsements will likely worsen over time.
- B. Modern consumers have more variety to choose from but face less safety than in the past.
- C. Ensuring responsible product endorsements requires collective efforts from both consumers and celebrities.
- D. More thorough research on product safety should be conducted to protect public health effectively.

Question 40 [1093042]: Which of the following best summarises the passage?

- A. Celebrities have a significant influence and gain various benefits from it, but not all act responsibly, as demonstrated by the Kera candy case, which raises concerns about safety and highlights the need for caution and shared responsibility.
- B. Celebrities often use their influence for good, as shown through the products they promote, like Kera, but a few individuals still misuse this power for the wrong reasons, thus needing more government control and stricter advertising regulations.
- C. Celebrities have a strong influence, such as shaping public opinion and earning from brands, but they sometimes exploit this power to advertise harmful products like Kera, so consumers should not trust celebrity-endorsed items without proper research.
- D. The fame of influencers comes with downsides like a lack of privacy, and sometimes greed leads them to betray their integrity, as seen in the Kera case, which demonstrates how the real quality of a product may differ from advertising and pose serious risks to consumers.
