

Point 1: We use will to talk about things happening in the future.

1. I _____ see you tomorrow.
2. The meeting _____ start soon.
3. She _____ not be here next week.
4. It _____ not be easy to pass the exam

Point 2: The negative form of will is will not, but we often contract this to won't in spoken English. However, do not use contractions in formal writing.

1. We _____ have enough money.
2. She _____ get home until six.
3. The test _____ be easy.
4. I _____ travel this year.

Point 3: We use will to express a future action that is immediate.

- Who      be at the meeting?
- Everyone will be there.
- When      it end?
- I will end at noon, just before lunch.

Point 4: We often use the contraction of will ('ll) in spoken English. However, do not use contractions in formal writing.

1. I' call you tomorrow.
2. She be here soon.
3. They give you call this week.
4. Arnold always says, "I' be back," in his movies
