Nelson Mandela: The Battle for Equal Rights

Nelson Mandela was the first black President of South Africa. He is famous for his long fight against apartheid, a system in which white people and non-white people were kept separate. Mandela spent 27 years in prison because he tried to bring equal rights to black South Africans.

Mandela was born on 18 July 1918 in South Africa. When he was young, he moved to Johannesburg and studied law. He soon became aware of the unfair treatment of black people. Black South Africans did not have the same rights as white people. They could not vote, marry white people, or use some public places.

Mandela and his friend Oliver Tambo started a law firm to help black people. In 1944, Mandela joined the African National Congress (ANC). The ANC wanted black South Africans to have equal political rights. However, speaking against the government was dangerous.

In 1962, Mandela was arrested and later sent to prison for life. He was imprisoned on Robben Island, where life was very hard. Prisoners had to break rocks and could only receive very few visits from their families.

People around the world supported Mandela and asked for his release. After many years in prison, he was finally freed in 1990. Later, Mandela became President of South Africa and worked to bring people together in peace.
