Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C or D on your answer sheet to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Pollution is a growing environmental problem in Vietnam, especially in major cities like Hanoi and Ho Chi Minh City. The rapid increase in industrial activities, urbanization, and vehicle usage has led to severe air, water, and land pollution. Factories release harmful gases and waste into the environment, while the rising number of motorbikes and cars contributes to poor air quality.

One of the biggest concerns is air pollution, which is caused by vehicle emissions, industrial activities, and construction dust. Many people in cities wear masks to protect themselves from polluted air. In addition, water pollution is also a serious issue. Many rivers and lakes in Vietnam are contaminated with industrial waste, sewage, and plastic garbage, affecting both human health and marine life.

The Vietnamese government has taken several measures to reduce pollution. These include stricter regulations on industrial waste disposal, promoting the use of public transportation, and encouraging green energy sources. Many environmental organizations are also working to raise awareness and encourage people to reduce plastic waste and plant more trees. However, pollution remains a major challenge.

Pollution affects millions of people in Vietnam every day. It can cause respiratory diseases, damage ecosystems, and harm the country's overall development. Experts suggest that stronger policies, better waste management, and improved public transportation systems are necessary to reduce pollution and create a cleaner environment for future generations.
