Choose the correct answer.

Every day, Leo's grandfather goes birdwatching in the lush jungle valley. One day, he brought Leo along to the rushing river. "I want to find the magic bird today. The first person to hear its beautiful song will become the kindest person in the world. Can you help me?" the grandfather said to Leo. "Yes! Yes! Of course," Leo exclaimed.

First, they spotted a green bird with red feathers, but it was not the magic bird. Then they spotted a blue bird with white stripes. That too was not the magic bird. Suddenly, they saw a golden bird with silver stars on its wings.

Leo's grandfather jumped for joy. It was the magic bird! They followed the bird quietly until it landed on a bamboo branch right above them. Leo, his grandfather, and his grandmother—who had joined them in the jungle—all stared up at the bird. Leo's grandparents felt that Leo should be the one to listen to the magic bird's song first. He was still young and being the kindest person at his age would certainly do a lot of good in this world.

Leo was happy and agreed to his grandparents' decision. While he was closing his eyes, waiting for the bird to sing its first note, Leo's sister, Mia, ran into the river clearing. She started singing a loud song of her own, causing the magic bird to chirp its magical tune directly at her before flying away. She laughed and said, "I love singing in the woods!"

Choose the correct answer.

Every day, Sam's grandfather goes walking in the quiet mountain village. One day, he brought Sam along into the misty hills. "I want to find the magic cat today. The first person to pet its soft fur will become the luckiest person in the world. Can you help me?" the grandfather said to Sam. "Yes! Yes! Of course," Sam exclaimed.

First, they spotted a green cat with red spots, but it was not the magic cat. Then they spotted a grey cat with white stripes. That too was not the magic cat. Suddenly, they saw a golden cat with silver stars on its back.

Sam's grandfather jumped for joy. It was the magic cat! They followed the cat quietly until it curled up on a smooth stone wall right in front of them. Sam, his grandfather, and his grandmother—who had joined them in the hills—all stared down at the cat. Sam's grandparents felt that Sam should be the one to pet the magic cat first. He was still young and being the luckiest person at his age would certainly do a lot of good in this world.

Sam was happy and agreed to his grandparents' decision. While he was gently reaching out his hand, waiting to touch the cat's soft fur, Sam's sister, Lily, ran into the clearing. She tripped over a small rock, tumbled forward, and landed right next to the wall, accidentally brushing her hand against the magic cat as it jumped away into the mist. She giggled and said, "Oops, I'm so clumsy!"
