Read the following passage about heart attacks and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the option that best fits each of the numbered blanks from 1 to 5.

Mounting evidence shows that more young adults are experiencing heart problems than in previous decades. Heart attacks occur when blood flow to the heart (1) _____. One reason is the growing number of lifestyle-related health problems, (2) _____. Other factors like tobacco, cocaine, marijuana, and alcohol use have been associated with increased risks of heart attack in younger adults, too.

The major risk factors—high blood pressure, high cholesterol, diabetes, and obesity—can damage arteries over time. While these conditions may be inherited, (3) _____ often play a larger role.

(4) _____. A recent survey found that 47% of people under 45 don't believe they're at risk for heart disease, and one-third of adults wouldn't confidently recognize heart attack symptoms. Half of 3,500 younger adults with significant risk factors didn't believe they were at risk before their heart attack occurred. Even fewer said their doctors warned them—especially women.

Experts say that getting young adults to care about heart health is a unique challenge. (5) _____. Experts emphasize early prevention, since untreated risk factors lead to worse outcomes over time.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 17 to 24.

For decades, the “body clock” was seen as a minor part of medical science, often dismissed as just the cause of jet lag. However, recent studies in chronobiology have revealed a more important reality: nearly every cell in our bodies follows a strict 24-hour cycle. This circadian system, managed by a “master clock” in the brain, not only regulates sleep; it also controls metabolism, hormone levels, and immune responses. In our modern world, this natural rhythm faces threats from artificial lighting and irregular lifestyle habits.

The consequences of circadian misalignment—the gap between our internal biological time and external social schedules—are serious. The chronic disruption of circadian cycles, common among shift workers and those using screens late at night, has been linked to a multitude of health issues, including Type 2 diabetes and obesity. Eating or exercising out of sync with metabolic peaks reduces nutrient efficiency. This shows that timing—not just diet—shapes long-term health.

Furthermore, there is a bidirectional relationship between circadian health and mental well-being. Disruptions in sleep cycles are often signs of coming depressive episodes, while stabilizing these rhythms can make psychiatric treatments more effective. Even the brain’s cleaning system, which flushes out waste, works mainly during deep sleep to remove toxic proteins linked to brain diseases. Ignoring our internal timing not only causes fatigue but also gradually harms neurological health.

Solving this crisis requires a change in how we design our cities and daily lives. Experts suggest using “circadian-friendly” lighting in offices and schools to mimic natural sunlight, supporting alertness during the day while reducing sleep interference at night. Individually, learning how to align habits with biological peaks is becoming a vital life skill. A healthy society should learn to honor the ancient rhythms hardwired into our DNA.

Question 17. The word “revealed” in paragraph 1 mostly means _____.

- A. discovered B. ignored C. confirmed D. questioned

Question 18. The word “disruption” in paragraph 2 is OPPOSITE in meaning to _____.

- A. disorder B. continuity C. instability D. interruption

Question 19. Which of the following best paraphrases the sentence in paragraph 2?

“Eating or exercising out of sync with metabolic peaks reduces nutrient efficiency.”

- A. Nutrient use is less efficient when meals or exercise reach metabolic peaks.
B. Eating or exercising at off-peak metabolic times promotes nutrient effectiveness.
C. Eating or exercising at the wrong metabolic times lowers nutrient absorption.
D. Low nutrient efficiency results from eating or exercising aligned with your natural clock.

Question 20. What does the phrase “these rhythms” in paragraph 3 refer to?

- A. psychiatric treatments B. depressive episodes C. disruptions D. sleep cycles Question 21. What can be inferred about the “brain’s cleaning system” mentioned in paragraph 3?

- A. It operates at maximum efficiency during periods of intense physical activity.
B. It requires a consistent social schedule to maintain long-term neurological health.
C. It is primarily responsible for triggering depressive episodes in shift workers.
D. Its malfunction may contribute to the development of neurological disorders.

Question 22. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in paragraph 4 as a solution to the circadian crisis?

- A. Individual biological alignment. B. Genetic modification of DNA rhythms.
C. Solar-simulating lighting systems. D. Urban and architectural redesign.

Question 23. Which paragraph highlights the need for biological awareness in public and personal spheres?

- A. Paragraph 1 B. Paragraph 2 C. Paragraph 3 D. Paragraph 4

Question 24. Which of the following is NOT supported by the passage?

- A. Disruptions in circadian rhythms may reduce the effectiveness of mental health treatments.
B. Aligning daily habits with biological timing can contribute to improved long-term health.
C. Artificial lighting outweighs other factors in causing circadian misalignment.
D. Deep sleep plays a role in eliminating substances associated with neurological disorders.

Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D on your answer sheet to indicate the best answer to each of the following questions from 25 to 34.

The Impact of Internet Slang on Modern English

The formal acceptance of internet slang shows a fundamental change in how the English language grows today. Some people may think that terms like “skibidi,” “delulu,” or “tradwife” are just short-term digital trends. However, their recent inclusion in the Cambridge Dictionary serves as a strong answer to those critics. This decision confirms the lasting influence of the TikTok generation, showing that these expressions are no longer just on the edges of our daily talk but have become central to modern communication.

[I] This phenomenon is not just about a collection of harmless slang words. Instead, it reflects a deeper “post-truth” world where personal beliefs often become more important than facts. [II] For example, the term “delulu,” once a small insult, now shows a social shift where people choose their own reality. [III] At the same time, the “tradwife” movement uses beautiful, glossy social media photos to make traditional housework look like a perfect dream. [IV]

Supporting this change is the “broligarchy” - a powerful group of tech leaders whose platforms control how these terms spread. From using “mouse jigglers” to pretend to be working to the use of “skibidi” as a word that often has no real meaning, these terms reflect the complex social lives of our tech-focused era.

Why does this “internet talk” matter so much? It works like a “soothing lullaby” where chaotic media makes the public feel comfortable but also disconnected from real life. Experts argue that the younger generation is very good at using ironic humor but struggles to find real meaning in things. If these simple phrases continue to replace serious thought, we might lose our ability to use language as a tool for clarity. It is essential to see the hollow nature of these attractive digital trends to protect our intellectual depth in an age where computer algorithms have so much influence over what we think and say.

Question 25. According to paragraph 1, what does the inclusion of Internet slang in the Cambridge Dictionary prove?

- A. It suggests that the TikTok generation does not care about language.
- B. It shows that these words will only be popular for a short time.
- C. It acts as a firm confirmation of the lasting impact of digital words.
- D. It shows how companies are forcing dictionaries to change their rules.

Question 26. Which of the following is the best main idea for paragraph 1?

- A. YouTube and TikTok are the only places where new English words are created.
- B. The way English grows is changing because of how young people talk online.
- C. Internet humor is becoming too difficult for most people to understand.
- D. Dictionary editors are struggling to understand new internet trends.

Question 27. Which of the following is NOT mentioned as an expression reflecting social or work changes?

- A. mouse juggler
- B. delulu
- C. broligarchy
- D. soothing lullaby

Question 28. The word “their” in the first paragraph refers to _____.

- A. the TikTok generation
- B. terms like “skibidi” or “delulu”
- C. dictionary writers
- D. digital fad

Question 29. The word “glossy” in paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. very expensive and modern
- B. difficult to see or understand
- C. shiny and high-quality
- D. attractive but not showing the whole truth

Question 30. According to the passage, who controls the way new internet terms spread?

- A. powerful tech leaders
- B. language critics
- C. the TikTok generation
- D. dictionary writers

Question 31. Which of the following best paraphrases the underlined sentence in the final paragraph?

- A. If we keep using simple slang instead of thinking deeply, we may no longer be able to communicate clearly.
- B. Language is becoming a better tool for communication because these phrases help us think more seriously.
- C. Clear speaking is the main reason these simple internet phrases are popular today.

D. We should use more simple phrases so that everyone can understand our serious thoughts more clearly.

Question 32. Where in the passage does the following sentence best fit?

This shift can be clearly seen in the way certain online terms have moved from casual jokes to markers of social attitudes.

- A. [I] B. [III] C. [IV] D. [II]

Question 33. What can be inferred from the passage?

- A. Dictionaries only accept new words after they are used by famous leaders.
- B. Young people use “skibidi” to make sure older people cannot understand them.
- C. Constant exposure to chaotic media might make people less connected to reality.
- D. The “tradwife” movement is the only reason people no longer believe in facts.

Question 34. Which of the following is the best summary of the passage?

- A. Internet slang is a great way to make communication clearer and deeper.
- B. Tech leaders are using slang words to control how people vote in elections.
- C. The Cambridge Dictionary proves that algorithms now control the entire English language.
- D. While internet words are popular, they might hide a lack of real meaning and make us think less.
