Why are Concerts So Great?
We all love concerts, right? Well, scientists now say that concerts are good for you! Here's how:

Concerts make you feel good.
When you worry a lot, your brain makes a chemical called cortisol. It makes you feel sad. But when you are listening to music at a concert, your brain makes less cortisol. This helps you to relax and not worry. You remember this good feeling for a long time. Your friends remember the good feeling too, so you can talk about the concert again and again!

Concerts are good for your social life.
There are hundreds or thousands of people at concerts. They all love the same music as you, so a concert is a good way to find new friends. Doctors say that having a lot of friends keeps you happy. Go to a concert and make friends!

Concerts help you exercise.
You can dance at many concerts. At rock, pop, and heavy metal concerts, people dance a lot. The exercise you get at a rock concert is the same as at a gym. Now you can choose: Do I want to go to the gym? Or, do I want to go to a concert?

Concerts help you live longer!
You can live longer when you go to concerts. All that exercise and making friends make you a healthier person. Many people say that a person who goes to concerts can live longer! So go to a concert soon!
