Hey Helen, help me please! I have a big problem. I'm on the basketball team now and there's a game tomorrow. I'm scared. It's my first game and I don't want to play badly. The team will be angry with me! They are all great players. The other team is really good, too. I don't want the team to lose. This is bad! You're my best friend, Helen, and I need advice now! -Phil

Hi Phil,
Congratulations for being on the team! Well, you can lie to the team. You can tell them you have a cold and a fever. Then you can miss the game. But you are on the basketball team because you are a good player! It's OK to be scared. I bet all the players are scared a little. Here's my advice: I think you should go to bed early tonight. You should have a good rest. Tomorrow, I'm sure you'll feel happy. Then have a great game! I'm sure you'll win! -Helen

Thanks, Helen. I feel a little better after that advice! But I have another problem! My mom feels sick. I want her to watch the game tomorrow. But she has a sore throat and a cough. It's not too serious, but she doesn't feel good. I want someone to be there for me, but she can't come tomorrow, right? Please, I need your advice again! –Phil

Hi, Phil. I'm sorry about your mom! Tell her "feel better" from me. Well, the question isn't "Can she go to the game, tomorrow?" It's "Should she go to the game tomorrow?" You know the answer to that, right? She should stay at home and rest. Give her lots of hot tea. And don't worry! I'll be there for you tomorrow! –Helen
