Choose the correct answer.

The Frog in the Well

There was a frog that lived in a shallow well. "Look how well off I am here!" he told a big turtle from the Eastern Ocean. "I can hop along the wall of the well when I go out, and rest by a crack in the bricks on my return. I can imagine everything with only my head above water. No crabs can compare with me. I am master of the water and lord of this shallow well. Why don't you come here more often to have a good time?"

Before the turtle from the Eastern Ocean could get his left foot into the well, he caught his right claw on something. So he stopped and stepped back then began to describe the ocean to the frog.

"It's more than a thousand miles across and more than ten thousand feet deep. In ancient times there were floods more than ten years, but yet the water in the ocean never increased. And later there were droughts more than eight years, but yet the water in the ocean never grew less. It has remained quite constant through the ages. That is why I like to live in the Eastern Ocean."

Then the frog in the shallow well was silent and felt a little abashed.

A heat wave is a period of excessively hot weather, which may be accompanied by high humidity, especially in oceanic climate countries. The definition recommended by the World Meteorological Organization is when the daily maximum temperature of more than five consecutive days exceeds the average maximum temperature by 5 °C (9 °F), the normal period being 1961–1990.

While definitions vary, a heat wave is measured relative to the usual weather in the area and relative to normal temperatures for the season. Temperatures that people from a hotter climate consider normal can be termed a heat wave in a cooler area if they are outside the normal climate pattern for that area. The worst heat wave in recent history was the European heat wave of 2003.

The 2010 Northern Hemisphere summer resulted in severe heat waves, which killed over 2,000 people. It resulted in hundreds of wildfires which causing widespread air pollution, and burned thousands of square miles of forest.

POINSETTIAS

The poinsettia is native to Mexico. It is found in the wild in deciduous tropical forest at moderate elevations. It is also found in the interior in the hot, seasonally dry forests. There are over 100 cultivated varieties of poinsettia.

Poinsettias remain one of the most popular holiday flowers. Hybridizers have expanded the range of colors from the familiar red to pastel yellow and vibrant bi-colors.

The showy colored parts of Poinsettias that most people think of as the flowers are actually colored bracts (modified leaves). The yellow flowers, or cyathia, are in the center of the colorful bracts. The plant drops its bracts and leaves soon after those flowers shed their pollen. For the longest-lasting Poinsettias, choose plants with little or no yellow pollen showing.

To keep the poinsettia in bloom as long as possible, maintain a temperature of 65 - 75 degrees F. during the day. Dropping the temperature to about 60 degrees F at night will not hurt the plant. However, cold drafts or allowing the leaves to touch a cold window can injure the leaves and cause premature leaf drop. If you've ever seen a gangly poinsettia in bloom, with only a couple of sad looking leaves hanging on, it was probably exposed to temperatures that were too cool or extreme shifts in temperature.

9. What is the purpose of writing the text?
 - (A) To explain the use of poinsettias.
 - (B) To describe poinsettias in general.
 - (C) To tell how to keep poinsettias fresh.

11. "However, cold drafts or allowing the leaves to touch a cold window can injure the leaves and cause premature leaf drop."
What can we infer from the sentence?
 - (A) Poinsettia leaves can grow well in cold water.
 - (B) Don't put poinsettia leaves in cold air, otherwise it will drop.
 - (C) In cold weather poinsettia leaves won't cause premature condition.
 - (D) We can enjoy many poinsettia leaves through the window in summer.

When I was 8 years old, I used to go for music class two blocks away from home. Whenever I had to pay fees to the music class, my grandpa would accompany me so that he could hand over the money safely.

One day my grandpa gave me the fees (100 rupees I guess) and asked me to take it carefully as he could not come. I was scared that I would lose the money. I kept it in my notebook. While walking I looked at it every few seconds to make sure that it was there. To my surprise, when I opened the book half way to the class, the money wasn't there! I didn't know how I lost it. I came back all the way searching for it and couldn't find it. I was running here and there which made a dog mad and it started chasing me. I ran home crazily. When I reached home I was panting and crying terribly. I was still in shock that when my grandparents asked me what happened, I just said "Dog.. Dog.. They thought a dog actually bit me and were very tense. When the situation settled down, I told them what had happened. They did not scold me for losing the money because they were relieved that I wasn't bitten by a dog.

The Tiger and the Hare

A Tiger named Blind Fury became the king of a forest. He made a law that every day an animal should appease his hunger by falling a prey to him. At this rate, in the course of a few months, a great number of animals had been eaten up; the beasts that remained held a council.

A hare among them, named Tiny Trick, observed, "I have a trick whereby I can get rid of Blind Fury, if you would let me take my chance with him tomorrow."

They agreed. The usual breakfast hour of Blind Fury was nine; but Tiny Trick trudged on, and came to him at twelve.

"Hullo! You rude little wretch! What keeps you so long from our presence?" said Blind Fury.

"May it please your majesty," said Tiny Trick, "in a well by the road I have travelled there is another king like your majesty. He said I should not go without appeasing his hunger. It was with difficulty I could obtain permission of him to see you, your majesty, for a moment and return."

"Lead the way to the well," said Blind Fury. "Yes, your majesty," said Tiny Trick.

When Blind Fury came to the well he found his own shadow reflected in it, and, fancying that it was another tiger, a rival, leapt into it and was drowned. The beasts of the forest praised Tiny Trick as the savior of the state.

It happens that little folks do great things for the public good.
