Mark was born on May 14th, 1984, in Dobbs Ferry, New York. At an early age, he created Synapse Media Player, an early operating system version of an Mp3 and an instant messaging application for his father's business. He even designed computer games for his friends. When Mark was at Harvard, he developed a university social network based on the need to join different communities of the university.

In 2004, Mark Zuckerberg surprised the world when he and other colleagues co-built one of the most recognized and used social networks of today. In a short time, Mark opened his own company and became very rich, successful, and famous. But it wasn't easy. At the beginning, Harvard University accused him of violating individual privacy and hacking their internal system. Three years later, Facebook was chosen by most media experts as "the website of the decade" with more than 500 million users all around the world.

Behind Facebook's tech essence, there is a social phenomenon that has revolutionized people's lives. Mark sees his company as the platform to empower people to share openly and communicate online in rich and varied ways. Facebook's creator is now focused on the future of Facebook. He and his team of collaborators are interested in improving the social experience of users by giving them more and better options to interact over the net.
