

I prefer studying alone to study in a group

I live in a nuclear family of 5 members

All of my family members stay together under the same roof

If I were to change one thing about my studies, it would be the volume of homework

I find myself get along with my younger brother most

As a high-school student, I have so much homework to do at home, which makes me so stressed out

We can sit back talking for hours and hardly have an argument

Although we do not really understand each other, my family is always full of love and care

However, in the future, it can change because my siblings and I will move out for universities in other cities

Studying alone allows me to stay focused and review learnt lessons more easily
