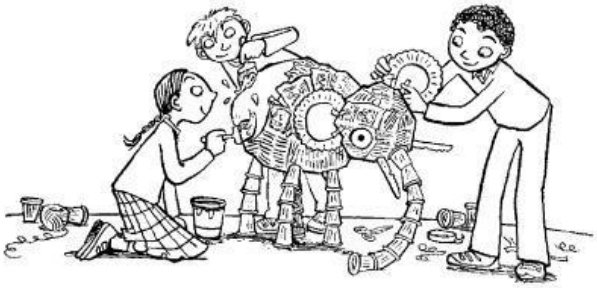
The elephant



One day, Maria's teacher, Mrs White, came to class with some great news. 'The museum is having a competition! Every class is going to make an animal out of recycled materials,' she said. Maria and the other children were excited.

The children brought materials from home. Soon, the class had 50 paper cups, 6 boxes of newspapers, 2 paper plates and 2 plastic knives. 'What sort of animal are we going to make with these things?' asked the children. Mrs White smiled and said, 'Think of different animals and how you can make them!'

The children made a large space in the centre of the room and began to work. First, they made five very long things out of paper cups. Next, they made a large ball and a small ball out of newspaper.

Finally, they made the animal. The four long legs and a long nose, called a trunk, were made of the paper cups. The head and body were made from painted newspapers. The two ears were made of paper plates. The two long teeth, called tusks, were made of plastic knives. It was a beautiful elephant!
