Visiting the Museum of Natural History

The Museum of Natural History in New York City is a favorite with both children and adults. To get there, first go to the bus station on 42nd Street. There's a subway station right under the bus station. Go down to the subway and take the Eighth Avenue C train. Then, get off at the subway stop that says "Museum of Natural History." When you get off the train, you'll see signs for the museum. Just follow them.

Once you get to the museum, there is a lot to do. You can look at pictures of interesting plants, animals, and birds. You can watch movies in a special movie theater with a very large screen. You will feel like you are right inside the movie! There are also restaurants in the museum if you get hungry, or stores if you want to buy something. It's a great place to visit!
