Wat Rattanattaram or Wat Lan Hoi temple

Wat Rattanattaram or Wat Lan Hoi is located in Nadi District, Prachinburi. It is probably one of the most unique temples. Wat Lan Hoi in Thai means the "Temple of a Million Shells." Most of the buildings in Wat Lan Hoi are covered in seashells of different shapes and sizes. These decorations were made by the skillful hands of the abbot, monks, and novices. They have also created statues and flowers from seashells. Wat Lan Hoi is full of Buddhist art, all beautifully covered in seashells. As you walk into the temple, you will see a large reclining Buddha. The Hor Phra Kaew Three Seasons is one of the most important buildings. The exterior is decorated with seashells in golden-orange tones, arranged like overlapping flowers. The entrance features large Naga statues on both sides, adorned with green and gold seashells. Inside, you can find statues of parrots and various Buddha statues. Many holy Naga statues, all covered in beautifully arranged seashells in different colors, can also be seen. Behind the temple, a small bamboo bridge leads out into a rice field, with bamboo huts nearby for relaxation. If you are looking for an "unseen" Thailand experience and a truly unique temple, Wat Rattanattaram, or Wat Lan Hoi, should definitely be on your list to visit.
