Read the following reviews of eight animated films.

Reviews of animated films

A. Aero

You'll want to see this film again and again, with a wonderful cast of animals, and folk music soundtrack sung by studio performers. And you'll learn something new about the characters each time you watch. Based on the book by a well-known author, it's a favorite for all the family.

B. Magic Makers

This is a gentle film about a village of animals who all help each other through life - but things don't always go at all as they expected. In fact, they're usually far better! A beautiful, funny film with great songs you won't forget. You'll never get tired of watching it!

C. Imagining

While you're watching this beautiful film, you'll also be entertained by the wonderful piano and violin music that accompanies it. It's a film for the whole family, including young children, to sit down and see together. And everyone will find that they have something in common with the people in the film.

D. The Dance

Although they haven't been together for long, a group of brave dancers decides to put on a performance, and their experiences are both funny and sad. The film's message is particularly suitable for teenagers, and the animation, in the form of old-fashioned cartoons rather than created by computers, is spectacular.

E. Roundabout

The picture is so fantastic, they almost need nothing more than the piano music that accompanies them. The film focuses on some brave friends who come together to support each other in various ways, and the well-known performers saying their words bring something really special to it. The film has notes to teach teenagers.

F. Terry

The pop music in this film is great, as it features the voices of top performers. The film follows a friendly tiger in the jungle, who becomes a hero to his friends. This film first came out in the 70s, and the graphics in this beautiful film have changed very little.

G. Rainbow

The whole family will sing along to the songs by well-known performers in this film. Choose which of the characters is most like you - and who's your hero! From the book by teenagers' author Dylan Peters, it's been a favorite with audiences since it came out years ago.

H. Constanz

This beautiful film, with simple graphics, is based on the well-known novel, which has become very popular in school classrooms. Although it's full of comedy situations and surprises from beginning to end, the film also has a serious message and will leave you with something to think about after you've watched it.

Question 6 (Question ID: 99-1090986)

The people below all want to watch an animated film. Decide which review aminated film would be the most suitable for each person.

Q6.1.....

Kerim wants a film that uses traditional animation methods, such as simple drawings rather than computers to create pictures. He particularly enjoys films about animals, and with great songs sung by well-known singers.

Q6.2.....

Alice, her mum and small sister want a film they can all enjoy. Alice loves films where she feels the main characters are like her, and that have soundtracks involving only instruments, with no singing.

Q6.3.....

Lukas enjoys films that make him laugh, but that he can learn something from at the same time. He's a keen reader, and he'd like a film of something he's probably already read.

Q6.4.....

Minnie wants to see a happy film that isn't just about heroes against bad people. She'd like a film that's full of surprises, that she'll want to watch over and over again.

Q6.5.....

Susana wants to see a film about characters that show courage in different situations, and that have the voices of famous actors. She'd like the film to have really beautiful animation.

Whale-watching trip

by Jack Madison, 15

A while ago, my friend Olivia was telling me about a whale-watching trip she'd been on, in Canada. I wanted to tell her I was about to do the same thing, on the north coast of the UK, where my grandparents live. Whales had recently appeared there again, and my grandparents were convinced we'd see some so I was sure my trip would be as good as Olivia's! But then I saw some reviews of the trip my dad had booked for us when no one had seen any whales at all. So, in the end, I decided not to tell Olivia anything about my trip, in case it wasn't successful! Anyway, Dad and I set off on our trip - which was Dad's idea and it was fantastic! Traveling out to sea on the tour boat with our guide, we soon reached the spot where whales often appeared. Then we waited and nothing happened. I was sure this wouldn't last, though. People kept calling out they'd seen one, which was exciting but then it turned out they were wrong. Then finally I saw something move under the water a minke whale! So I felt like a hero for the rest of the trip!

The whale was a wonderful sight, with its huge back not far from the boat. Our guide said it was around five tonnes in weight and around 10 metres long. Yet, despite its size, it swam alongside us at speed, and with little effort. We waited to see if more appeared, and sometime later, we saw three more some distance away, that kept diving under the water and coming up again. Then just after I'd filmed them, they disappeared.

Although the water's less deep around the coast, larger whale species appear in the area with minke whales, feeding on fish. But minkes are curious creatures, so they're more likely to approach tourist boats — which was why we were successful! Then later, upon the cliffs, we looked out to sea, searching for signs of whales. Sometimes seabirds diving into the water means whales are around, as they're stealing the whale's meal. We were unlucky, sadly — but we'll be back!

Question 12 (Question ID: 99-128763)

Computer game exhibition

Have you ever tried playing the kind of video games that your parents played? The Museum of Science in Manchester, in the UK, has held an exhibition for the last few years, which involves visitors to do exactly that. It offers them the chance to play games from the last 40 years, in various sessions throughout the day.

These video game sessions have now become one of the main attractions of the museum. They are full of people every day, playing a wide range of games.

Q12.1..... For parents, for example, these are usually the games they used to play in their childhood. There's also an educational purpose to the games. For instance, some old types of computers, dating back 40 years, are also available in the sessions. They were originally used in classrooms to teach pupils to write their own computer programs. Q12.2..... Now, the museum is holding workshops that encourage children to learn similar skills - and they're still very popular.

The sessions are also seen as social events, as people discover how much fun it is to play video games with other family members. And there's also an area at Power Up! where a number of visitors can sit down together. Q12.3..... And nowadays, this is often how fans of video games are more likely to experience playing.

The exhibition also shows how much progress technology has made over the last 40 years. Parents can often remember playing very simple games. But the games that are played today are more complex. Q12.4..... And the players also have to use much more complicated techniques.

However, one serious side of the exhibition is that organizers also want to show that video gaming is an important industry, employing many skilled people. Q12.5.....That way, people who enjoy gaming will also understand all the hard work, talent and imagination that goes into creating these amazing games.
