Sarah always visits her grandmother on Sundays. She usually takes the bus at 1 o'clock. Last Sunday, she waited at the bus stop, but the bus was late.

Sarah waited for ten minutes. Then she waited for twenty minutes. She looked at her watch many times. She was worried because her grandmother was waiting for her, too. She was also a little cold and alone.

In the end, after thirty minutes, she saw the big yellow bus. It arrived with many passengers inside. When Sarah got on the bus, the driver said, "I am very sorry. The traffic was terrible in the town centre."

When Sarah arrived at her grandmother's house, she was quite tired. Her grandmother opened the door with a smile. "I was worried about you!" her grandmother said.

"I am sorry, Grandma. The bus was late," Sarah explained.

"It is okay," said her grandmother. "Come inside! I have your favourite chocolate cookies and hot milk ready for you."

Sarah felt happy while she was eating the cookies and talking to her grandmother on the sofa in the living room. She forgot about the bus journey, and she told her grandmother all about her week at school, her friends, and her new art project.

Example:

Sarah goes to her grandmother's house on Sundays.
