Globalization in the Near Future

Early one morning. I had a meeting with my friends at the mall. It took me 5 minutes to arrive on foot from my house.

My friends all have different jobs; one is a technician, one is a teacher and one is a salesperson.

We discussed our ideas about future trends. The technician believed that more people would have their own personal gadgets. The teacher said that most people would communicate by using social media. Finally, the salesperson told me that people would buy more gadgets for working in the company instead of computers because they are easier. I wrote their opinions on my personal laptop and then bought each of my friends coffee
