Suddenly, it started to rain and we ran back to the house.

COMPREHENSION QUESTIONS

I am a student at a public school in Quito, and I always do my homework in the evening. Right now I am writing about this experience because my teacher wants a personal story. Yesterday evening, I was doing my English homework at my desk when suddenly the lights went out, leaving the entire house in complete darkness. While I was carefully looking for a candle in the kitchen drawers, my sister arrived home from her university classes. After that, we sat together on the living room sofa and talked about our day until the lights came back on an hour later. Now I understand that these small moments are important. My family is planning a short trip for next month, and we will spend three days at the beach. I am sure we will tell this funny story again, and my sister is already preparing the photos for our album. Next time the lights go out, I will look for the candles first!
