The haunted church

People from my town are very religious. Actually, they go to the service without any excuses every Sunday. But they go to the new chapel that our community built and founded about one year ago. They reason to found a new one was simple. The former big church got burnt about two years ago. The fire started out of nowhere, so the fire department could not do much about it considering it was a classic structure made of wood almost completely. However, some neighbors have commented for some time that weird events had happened inside the old church. Some of them even dared to say that it was haunted because they had observed candles moving without a reason inside that night, while others mentioned experiencing somebody or something touched them when they were praying alone. Of course, the priest denied such events saying they were absurd. But the truth is that there was an old graveyard behind the church where the first inhabitants of the town used to bury their beloved ones. Apparently, nobody cares about it anymore because nothing supernatural happens in there.
