Mai's School Shop

Mai is a 13-year-old student who loves helping others. Two months ago, she opened a small charity shop at school called "Students Helping Students." She wanted to sell affordable school supplies and help poor students in her community. First, Mai asked her teachers for permission to use an empty classroom. They agreed and helped her arrange tables and shelves. Mai collected used books, pens, notebooks, and bags from her classmates. Everything was still in good condition. She cleaned them carefully and organized them by type. Books cost only 5,000 dong, and notebooks were 2,000 dong each.

Every break time, Mai and her friends took turns managing the shop. They kept a notebook to record what they sold. Students loved shopping there because prices were very cheap. Some teachers also donated new supplies for the shop. After selling items, Mai saved all the money in a special box.

The hardest part was finding enough products to sell. Many students wanted to buy things, but donations were limited. Mai solved this problem creatively. She organized a "Donation Day" every month when students brought items they no longer needed. She also made beautiful handmade bookmarks and sold them for 1,000 dong each.

After two months, Mai raised 2 million dong. She used this money to buy new uniforms and books for five poor students. Her shop showed everyone that small actions can create big changes. Now, more students want to help run the shop!
