When I moved to the city for my new job, I started house hunting. Initially, I dreamt of living in a quiet _____[1] with a big garden but soon realized it was too expensive for someone just starting their career. My next thought was to find a two-bedroom _____[2] in a high building, hoping for a place with a great view of the city skyline.

I contacted a _____[3] who was very helpful. She showed me a unit in a high _____[4], but I noticed _____[5] in the corner of the ceiling, and the monthly _____[6] was a little over my budget.

Then, I found an ad for a _____[7], which shared a wall with a quiet neighbour. It offered more space than a flat, but without the isolation of a detached house. I met the _____[8], who lived next door, and he seemed quite amiable. The place was almost perfect, but I learned that the _____[9] would be higher due to the older heating system. In the end, I settled for a cozy flat. It's not perfect; the _____[10] in the shower can be frustrating, but it's a good start for my life in the city.
