Why was Emma worried when Sophie moved away?

Friendship in the Digital World

Friendship is an important part of our lives, but keeping in touch with friends is not always easy, especially when they live far away. Today, modern technology helps us communicate with people around the world. We can send messages, make video calls, share photos and even spend time together in virtual games.

Emma and Sophie have been best friends for five years. Last summer, Sophie moved to another country with her family. At first, Emma was worried that their friendship would change. She felt a little jealous when Sophie started making new friends at her new school.

However, the girls decided to work on their friendship. They usually send each other messages after school and have a video call every Sunday. They also keep each other posted about important events in their lives.

One day, Sophie forgot to call Emma because she was busy preparing for a school project. Emma got angry and didn't answer Sophie's messages. Later, Sophie called her back and explained the situation. She was frank about her feelings and apologised. Emma realised that she had been a little selfish.

Both girls understood that friendship requires patience, loyalty and understanding. They also learnt that good communication is the key to solving problems. Sometimes it is easier said than done, but true friends should respect and support each other.

Next summer, Emma will visit Sophie, and they are already making plans together. They believe that distance cannot destroy a strong friendship if both people make an effort.
