Last year, when I left school and before I went to university, I got a summer job in Bournemouth with young people from different countries. They came to England to study English. They studied every morning and, in the afternoon, we visited interesting places with them. There were six other students like me working there.

Every two weeks we went to London Airport to meet new students and welcome them to England. The coach journey from Bournemouth is two hours long, so we spent the time on the way back telling them about the course and the activities. Three times a week we did sports with the students and twice a week we visited the local area. At weekends, we travelled to different parts of the country.

One weekend we visited London. On the first day we went on the London Eye. The students loved it. Then we did the bus sightseeing tour. On Sunday we went to Camden Market and the British Museum – the museum was my favourite part of the visit. Some students thought it was boring, but I loved it. Most of the students preferred the market. We really needed much more time to see everything!

- 1- The text is about a student that went to England to study the language.
- 2- The people that came to England were different ages, young and old people.
- 3- The students visited different parts of the city and country.
- 4- All the students thought that London was boring.
