Many teenagers today face health problems because of bad eating habits and lack of physical exercise. A recent survey shows that more than 30% of secondary school students eat fast food at least three times a week. Fast food contains a lot of fat, salt, and sugar, which can lead to overweight and obesity. Furthermore, many students spend hours sitting in front of screens playing video games instead of doing outdoor activities.

To build a healthy lifestyle, doctors suggest that teenagers should change their daily routines. First, they should replace soft drinks and junk food with fresh fruit, vegetables, and plain water. Fresh fruits provide essential vitamins that boost the immune system. Second, doing at least 30 minutes of physical exercise every day, such as cycling, swimming, or playing badminton, helps keep the body fit and strong. Finally, getting enough sleep (8 to 9 hours per night) is crucial for mental and physical recovery.
