When the Oxford English Dictionary announced its word of the year for 2015, the surprise was ... it wasn't a word! It was the 'face with tears of joy' emoji.

Casper Grathwohl, president of Oxford Dictionaries, decided that emojis were the most important new development in our use of language that year. In 2015, Hillary Clinton asked students to tell her how they felt about student loans in emojis. Classic literary works were translated into emojis – Moby Dick, for example, was renamed Emoji Dick!

Grathwohl, 44, says he's been avoiding using emojis himself until now – he didn't want people to think he 'was trying' to get in on teen culture! Emojis were originally popular with Japanese teenagers, and in the UK, a third of people over 40 have never used them. However, Grathwohl feels it's becoming acceptable for older people to use them now, and even the messages his mother sends him are full of them. Worldwide, six billion emojis are sent every day, and the 'face with tears of joy' is used the most.

Emojis help us to communicate better, but they aren't going to replace text language. And the 'face with tears of joy' won't appear in the Oxford English Dictionary. For a start, there's the problem of where to put it!
