

English Language – Grade 11 “Core”

Theme 2: Teenage Friendships | Reading 2 – Evaluative Reading

Teacher: Hanzada Mamdouh

Student: _____

Class: _____

Date: _____

Read the text, then choose the correct answer: A, B, or C.

Are Friendships Always Good for Teenagers?

Friendship is an important part of teenage life. Friends can make young people feel happy, safe, and understood. However, not all friendships have a positive effect. In my opinion, good friendships are very important, but teenagers need to choose their friends carefully.

One major advantage of friendship is emotional support. Teenagers often face problems at school or at home, and a good friend can listen to them and offer advice. Friends can also encourage each other to study harder, develop new skills, and achieve their goals. For example, students who study together may understand difficult lessons more easily. These friendships can help teenagers become more confident and successful.

Another benefit is that friends help teenagers develop social skills. By spending time together, they learn how to communicate, share ideas, solve problems, and respect different opinions. These skills are useful not only during the teenage years but also in adult life. In addition, doing activities with friends can reduce stress and make free time more enjoyable.

Despite these advantages, friendship can sometimes have negative effects. Some teenagers feel pressured to follow their friends, even when they know something is wrong. For example, they may stop studying, break school rules, or spend too much time online just to fit in. Such behaviour can affect their education and relationships with their families. Another problem is that some friends may be jealous, dishonest, or unwilling to respect personal boundaries.

I believe teenagers should not choose friends simply because they are popular. Instead, they should look for people who are honest, kind, and supportive. They should also feel comfortable saying no when they disagree with their friends. Parents and teachers can help teenagers understand the difference between healthy and unhealthy relationships.

To conclude, friendship can bring many benefits, but it can also create problems. The quality of a friendship matters more than the number of friends a person has. Choosing the right friends can help teenagers grow into responsible and confident adults.

Questions

1. Good friends help teenagers deal with their problems by _____.

- A. listening and offering advice
- B. making decisions for them
- C. ignoring their difficulties

2. Studying with friends can help students _____.

- A. avoid attending classes
- B. understand difficult lessons
- C. finish school without exams

- 3. Friendship helps teenagers prepare for adult life by developing their _____.
- A. ability to avoid disagreements
 - B. dependence on other people
 - C. communication and problem-solving skills
- 4. Some teenagers follow their friends' bad behaviour because they want to _____.
- A. feel accepted by the group
 - B. improve their school results
 - C. gain their teachers' respect
- 5. An unhealthy friendship may negatively affect teenagers' _____.
- A. ability to learn new skills
 - B. schoolwork and family relationships
 - C. confidence in making good friends
- 6. According to the writer, teenagers should refuse to follow friends who _____.
- A. encourage them to achieve their goals
 - B. listen to their problems
 - C. pressure them to do something wrong
- 7. The writer believes that successful teenage friendships depend mainly on _____.
- A. having a large number of friends
 - B. choosing honest and supportive friends
 - C. sharing the same interests as popular teenagers