The history of sweatshirts

These days, people wear sweatshirts all over the world as a basic clothing item. However, they have a very interesting history. In the 1920s, an American football player named Benjamin Russell Jr. invented the first sweatshirt because traditional wool uniforms were too hot and uncomfortable. In 1926, his father's clothing factory produced the new cotton shirts for the first time. Soon, students and athletes bought these comfortable sweaters in huge numbers.

The garment changed even more during the next decade. In the 1930s, the company Champion added hoods to sweatshirts to protect outdoor workers from freezing temperatures. During the 1960s, American universities printed their official names on the front of the clothes to create team spirit. In the 1970s, the famous movie Rocky made sweatshirts popular worldwide. Athletes and teenagers loved this casual style, and hip-hop culture adopted the trendy look too. Today, top fashion designers sell luxury sweatshirts for hundreds of dollars, and millions of people buy them every day.
