A Day on a City Farm

by Ashok

Last week, my school arranged for us to spend a day on a city farm. My parents wanted to take us to a farm the month before, but my brother was ill, so we couldn't go. City farms aren't new, but they are a great idea. Children can see animals that they don't normally find in a city and get some fresh air at the same time. It's like bringing the country to the city.

It was a great day, and we learned a lot about the animals that live there. When we arrived, we saw the list of jobs that we needed to do. My best friend, Clara, wanted to feed the animals. Our teacher wanted to go to the café for a cup of tea and then see the baby animals.

I didn't want to feed the animals, so I cleaned the animals' spaces. The chickens were easy to clean. They ran away when I opened the door, and they left us some eggs. The goats were more difficult and very loud! They tried to eat my clothes and anything else they could see. And the donkey was terrible. It only moved when we gave it an apple!

They have also got guinea pigs. Guinea pigs are really lively. They only sleep for a few hours a day and run around most of the day. They love being with their family, and they get lonely when they are not with other guinea pigs. They have very soft fur and very sharp claws. When guinea pigs eat vegetables, they don't need water.

They have got insects on the farm, too. There were some ladybirds. They live in special houses called hotels. There are lots of different kinds of ladybirds, but they all eat other insects. Birds don't like eating them because they don't like the taste of them. During the winter, you can find ladybirds living in big groups with other ladybirds.
