6. Reading: Different ways to stay active

Read texts A-C. Decide which text each statement refers to. Write A, B or C. A text may be used more than once.

A - Oliver

Oliver joined a swimming club last year after his doctor suggested that he should exercise more. At first, he found the early morning training difficult, but now he enjoys starting the day in the pool. He trains twice during the week and once at the weekend. A few months ago, he entered his first local competition and was surprised to finish second in his age group. He would like to compete again, although winning is not his main reason for swimming. He says that regular exercise gives him more energy and helps him sleep better. The hardest part is getting up early when he has a lot of homework.

B - Emma

Emma prefers team sports and has played volleyball for four years. She likes working with other people and says that her teammates have become some of her closest friends. This year she became the captain of her school team, which means she has more responsibility during matches and training. Last month, she hurt her wrist and had to miss two games. She still attended practices and helped the coach organise equipment. Emma is back on the court now, but she wears a support on her wrist and is more careful when she falls. Her team hopes to reach the regional final this spring.

C - Leo

Leo gets bored if he does the same activity for too long, so he changes sports throughout the year. In summer, he often goes cycling or kayaking, while in winter he prefers skiing and ice skating. He sometimes exercises alone, but he also enjoys doing activities with his older brother. Last year, a problem with his bike meant that he could not cycle for nearly a month, so he tried climbing instead. He does not care about competitions and has never wanted to join a sports team. For him, exercise is mainly a way to relax, spend time outdoors and try new things.

1. This person started an activity because of advice about their health. _____

2. This person enjoys doing different activities at different times of the year. _____
