EXPLORE

Last summer, Daniel traveled to London with his sister. It was his first time visiting another country, so he felt excited but a little nervous. Before leaving, he booked a hotel online, bought plane tickets, and packed his suitcase.

When they arrived, they took a bus from the airport to their hotel. During their stay, they visited famous places such as Big Ben, Buckingham Palace, and the British Museum. Daniel especially enjoyed the museum because he loves history.

One afternoon, they got lost while looking for a restaurant. Daniel asked a local person for directions in English. At first, he was nervous, but the person was friendly and helped them find the restaurant.

After five days, Daniel returned home feeling more confident about speaking English. He realized that traveling was a great opportunity to practise the language in real-life situations.
