

Even after Biden won the presidential election, Vanderbilt said she didn't expect Biden to be sworn in on inauguration day but that the Democrats would be rounded up and arrested - the theory doing the rounds among the QAnon circles at the time.
	'The military would haul them off. They said that Trump opened back up Guantanamo Bay and then the military would run the country, put it in martial law because the left were too unhinged and they were a danger to us and then Trump would come back when the government was rebuilt.'
	In our circle, the assumption of what would happen would be that most of the Democratic leaders there, quite a few of the Republican leaders, all the Hollywood elite that had attended they would all be arrested.
	She added: 'I know it sounds crazy; but it's what I believed.
	'I expected a blackout. I expected the TV to go black and nothing to work so we wouldn't see anything,' she said
When Biden's inauguration went ahead as planned, she said she went into 'panic mode' and planned to pull her daughter out of school.

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/article-9221599/South-Carolina-mom-says-lured-QAnon-conspiracy-theories-TikTok.html>

Write five questions about the above text